

Accelerated Distance Learning

By Brad Voeller

Accelerated Distance Learning is written for those who want to overcome the high cost of college education and speed up the process of earning a college degree. It explores non-traditional approaches to college including correspondence classes, on-line courses, Clepp tests, and credit for life experience. Brad also discusses sources of grants and scholarships.

Completing college in a non-traditional way takes organization. A section of the book is devoted to developing a detailed completion plan. If you want to finish early and pay less for your college education, this is the book for you.

Published in 2002, Accelerated Distance Learning is still the standard for those who want to take the path less traveled in college education.
